

Light Source System With Open Flames

Abstract

The light source system is a combination of two light sources with open flames that are placed in a multiple-legged, tube-like u-shaped container. The arrangement of the light sources is that one light source burns in the bottom of one leg with an upward-directed flame, and the other light source burns with a visibly downward-directed flame in the upper part of the second leg.